

August 2019

Governor Jay Inslee pulled out of the race for President, announcing the decision on the Rachel Maddow show.

He sent an e-mail formally announcing his intention to run for a third term as Governor. It is my expectation that he will continue to push for more climate change related legislation here, as well as support more progressive policies coming out from the Democratic base.

His decision to run for a third term puts the brakes on several other prominent political leaders from attempting to run for other offices. In most cases, the current slate of office holders will likely decide to run for another term in their respective offices — unless they decide to retire and sit out the next round of statewide elections.

Sara Stewart
Melanie Stewart and Associates
HPC Advocacy
Cascade Government Affairs
360-229-8168